A Peek at Our Week

Reading: Next week we will be reviewing comparing and contrasting in a nonfiction text. We will also begin looking at finding the problem and solution in a nonfiction text. This is also a RADD DUDE week. A simple way to help your children with this skill is to ask them questions. Then, have them restate the question and answer it.

Math: Students did excellent on their multiplication assessment! So proud of them for building such a strong multiplication foundation! Next week we will introduce the concept of division with groups, partitioning, repeated subtraction, and inverse operation. Students will be choosing a method that works for them! We will also be taking Math Acuity B next week. 😊

ELA: We will have a light week in writing and language arts. We will practice some free writing narratives using our transition words and proper sentence structures.

Science/SS: We will be concluding our measurement unit by learning about volume and capacity as well as measuring with liters!

From the Teacher's Desk

We will be attending the Nutcracker this Friday, December 11th. Please make sure students dress nice for the program (dresses/dress pants) and are on time for school! We will be leaving at 8:30. 😊

Student council will begin collecting gently used coats during December. Don's cleaners picks them up and delivers them to needy families in the community! There will be a box in the front lobby to collect.

We will be having a class party to ring in the new year on January 15th! Information on how you can help is coming!
